CALL FOR PAPERS

POLITICS AND THE LIFE SCIENCES, a peer-reviewed interdisciplinary journal published twice yearly by the Association for Politics and the Life Sciences, is issuing a general call for research papers in any of the journal's topic areas.

PLS covers a broad range of topics, including evolutionary and laboratory insights into political cooperative behavior, group conflict, war and terrorism; neuroscientifically based studies of political emotion and cognition; nonverbal analysis of leader displays; political analysis of life-sciences research, health policy, environmental policy, and biosecurity policy; and, philosophical analysis of life sciences problems, such as bioethical controversies. In addition to research articles, the journal also publishes reviews, analytical perspective pieces, book reviews, and invited theme essays.

Contributors include political scientists and political behaviorists; biosecurity and international-security experts; communication researchers; life scientists, clinicians, health policy scholars, and bioethicists; moral and evolutionary philosophers; environmental scientists and ecological economists; political-behavioral and environmental historians; science policy scholars and historians of science; and legal scholars. Recent papers by noted scholars have included:

- ✦ German flooding of the Pontine Marshes in World War II: Biological warfare or total war tactic? by Erhard Geissler and Jeanne Guillemin
- ✦ Biopolitical science, by Larry Arnhart
- ✦ Genuine fakes: Cloning extinct species as science and spectacle, by Amy Fletcher
- ✦ What rough beast? Synthetic biology, uncertainty, and the future of biosecurity, by Gautam Mukunda, Kenneth A. Oye, and Scott C. Mohr
- ✦ Competitive exclusion: A biological model applied to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, by J. Kristen Urban
- ✦ Deciding on human embryonic stem cell research: Evidence from Congress's first showdown with President George W. Bush, by Eileen Burgin
- ✦ Taking leaders at face value: Ethology and the analysis of televised leader displays, by Patrick A. Stewart, Frank K. Salter, and Marc Mehu

The journal is now in its 30th year of publication and has recently moved to an all-digital printing system with Allen Press, allowing for high quality photographic and line art reproductions. The journal welcomes submissions with visual illustrations, whether original photographs, historical document reproductions (e.g., maps, letters from government archives), or other graphical files. All files must be in digital format and have copyright clearance or permission to reprint from the copyright holder.

To Submit: Send a blind copy of your paper, with a separate cover sheet listing contact information, as an e-mail attachment to Laurette Liesen, Contributing Editor for Submissions and Peer Review, liesenla@lewisu.edu. Submissions should include an abstract, along with a set of key words relevant to the article. All research papers undergo a blind review process, with a turnaround time of about two months. For more information, see www.politicsandthelivesciences.org. Questions may also be addressed to Erik Bucy, Editor-in-Chief, ebucy@indiana.edu.
